“Winkle’s Legacy – the Farnborough Years”

Paul Beaver

For nearly six years, the then Lieutenant-Commander Eric (Winkle) Brown flew secret jets and captured German aircraft at the Royal Aircraft Establishment, in addition to his day job on the Aerodynamics Flight. All three required a level of skill and application which Eric had in abundance.

Paul Beaver, FRAeS, his authorised biographer, has access to family as well as official records to tell the story of the Farnborough years, so important to Eric in later life.
